LimLondon

This company has a strong brand image, with a good design identity that allows them to differentiate in their market. It uses few colors and has very defined sections.

In terms of user experience, I think it gives all the information that a person visiting their website is looking for. Its usability is good since the design resources do not prevent it from loading fast.

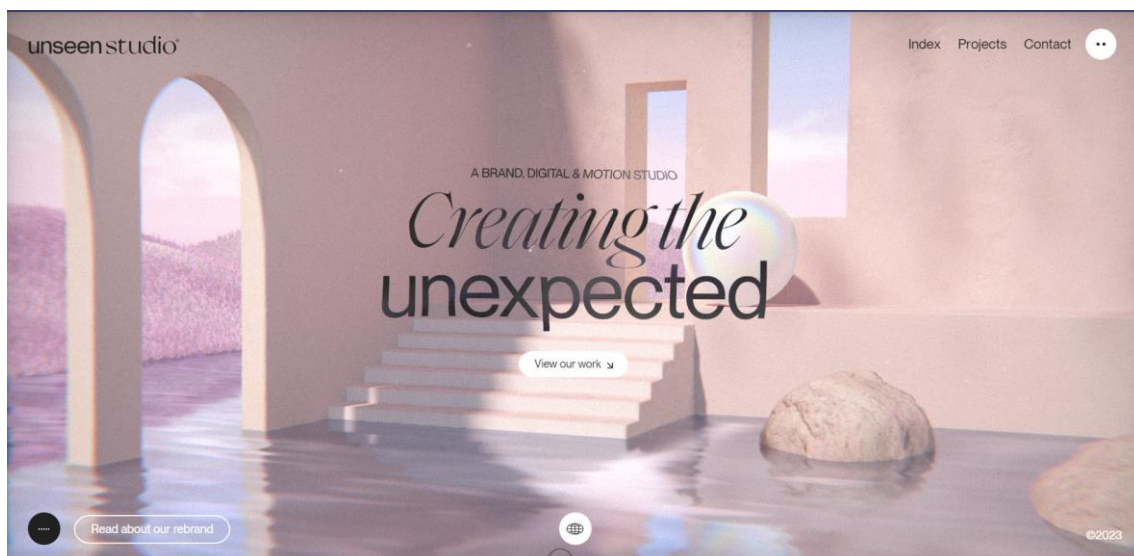

It also has a section with client's testimonials.

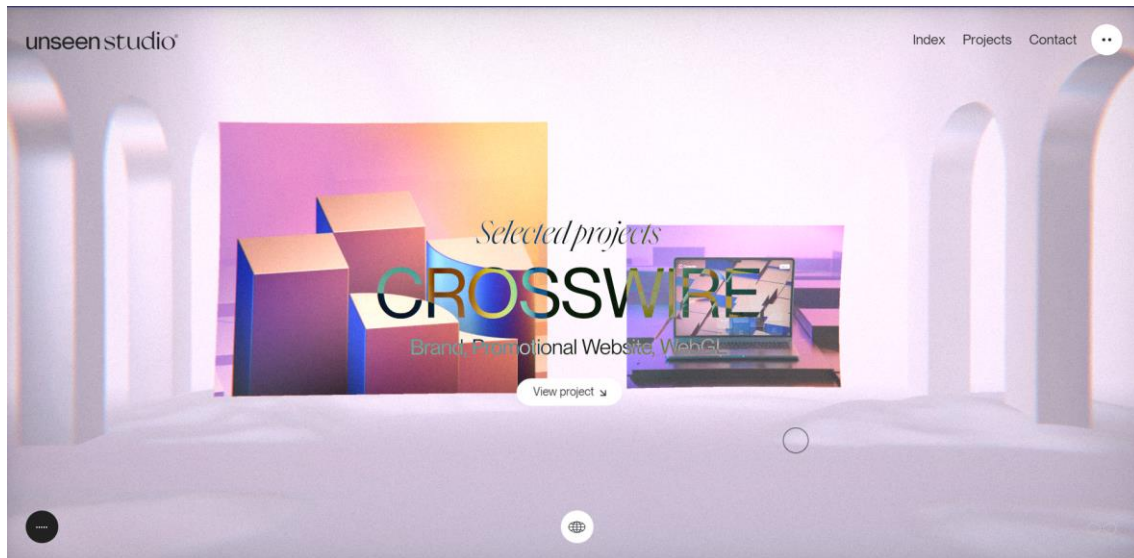

A detail that I like a lot, and I think users also agree, is that the cookie banner is not invasive at all. You have the information, but it does not interrupt the navigation flow.

Unseen studio

I like this website because it transmits very well what they do, their mission and business vision.

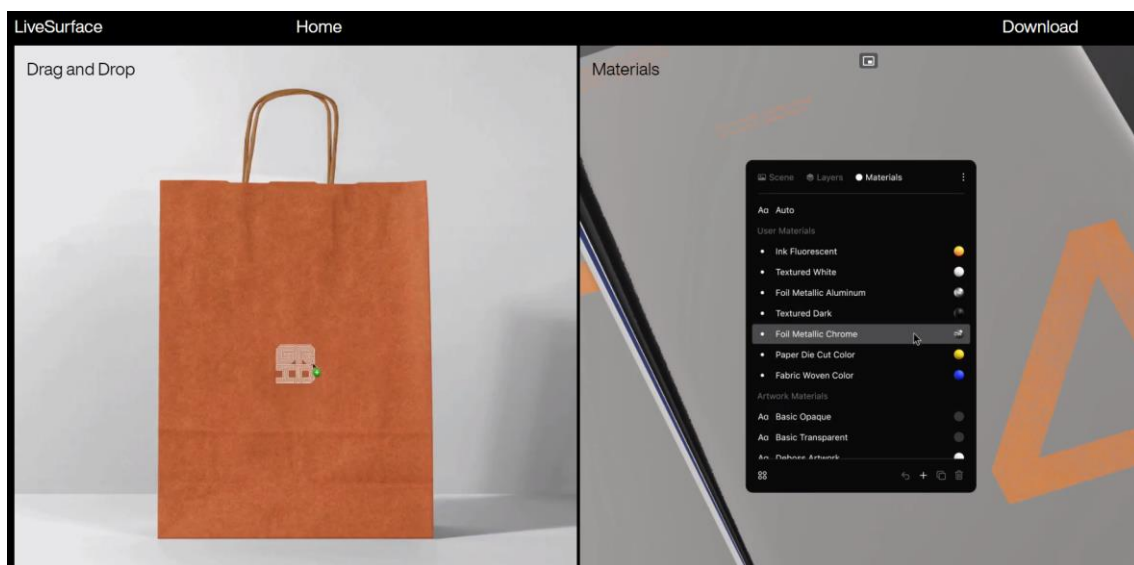

The animation in the projects section is really cool.

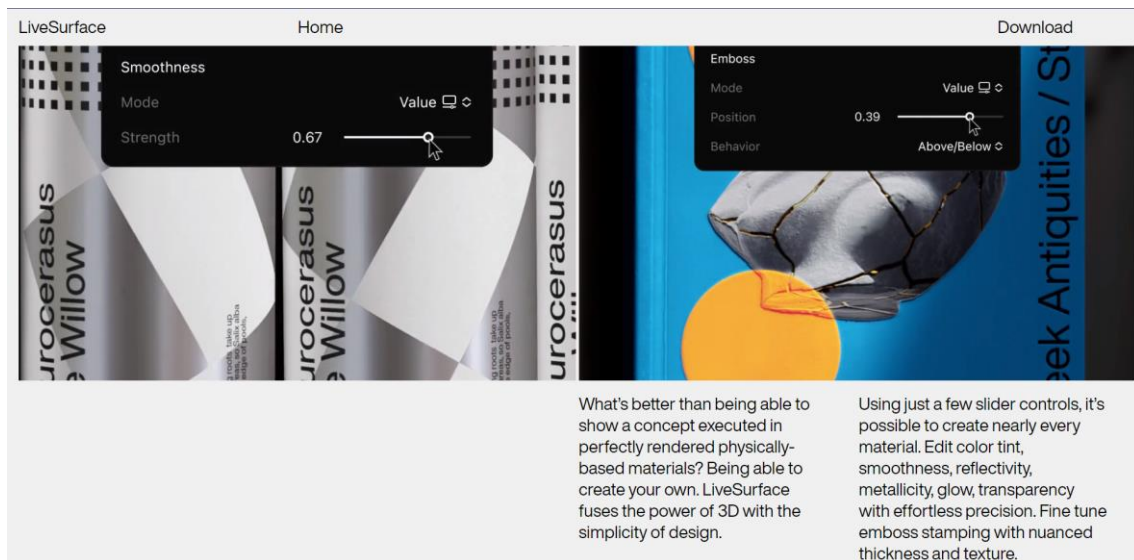

I think they show their work quite well. One thing that catches my attention is that in spite of its high graphic load and the amount of animations the web runs smoothly.

LiveSurface

This website is extremely useful because it allows you to see how your designs will look in your products.

Like the web commented before, it has a lot of images and animations but the web runs smoothly.

The user experience is well thought out and provides all the information a visitor is looking for.
